Biographical Summary

Constantin is a media professional with extensive work experience in Europe, South-East Asia and the Middle East. The scope of his work spans all aspects of journalism, from planning and production to broadcasting and publishing of PR content, TV shows and magazines.

After working with Norddeutsche Landes Bank in London, he joined German news broadcaster N24 in 2003 and subsequently Deutsche Welle, Germany's international broadcaster. Since 2006, he was the Dubai-based correspondent of DW-TV's Arabic language programme, where he was responsible for opening and running DW's Dubai bureau.

In January 2009, Constantin was seconded to German Foreign Office in Berlin where he is responsible for German media and cultural projects in the Arab World. His work included managing and implementing social media strategies for the Foreign Office and several German embassies, including guidance and protocols, in German, English, Arabic, Spanish and Portuguese.

Constantin is the author of the book "Germany for Sale" (Ausverkauf Deutschland), due to be published by leading German publishers Ullsteinbuchverlage in September 2010. He is fluent in English, German, Arabic and Spanish.
